"I forgot," she said. "Of course, I ought to ask Paul's permission first."

"Didn't he give the things to you?"

"Yes. But I don't feel justified in sending them away without at least his knowledge."

"I don't see that you are under any obligation."

"In the case of things of such great value I do. Don't be impatient. He will be back in a very short time, and then I can ask him."

Lord Eastling followed her across the room impatiently.

"And do you suppose," said he irritably, "after our scene last night, that he would let me do anything I wanted to do? No, he would refuse me out of pure cussedness. Come, give them to me. It's impossible that you should be free from the responsibility of looking after them till you come back."

"Indeed, I only wish I could. I hate jewellery. It is nothing but a responsibility and a worry to me. Just wait, and I'll get you the authorization you want."

"I can't wait," said he quickly.

"Come, have I your permission to take them away?"

"Yes. You have mine. But you must have Paul's, too."

"Hang Paul!" ejaculated Lord Eastling, as, intent on securing the booty which he intended to carry off and submit for inspection to the detective, he burst open the door of the bedroom, and to Lady Ursula's great alarm and distress, carried off before her eyes the heavy dressing bag which was standing on the floor, half hidden by the curtain.

"Give me the key," said he abruptly. And Lady Ursula, still frightened but by no means unwilling to get rid of the responsibility of the jewels, delivered it up to him.

Plunging his hand into the bag, he took out the cases containing the necklace, tiara, bracelets, rings, and other jewels which Paul had given to his bride; and bestowing an affectionate and mournful kiss upon his sister, disappeared with his booty, leaving Lady Ursula perplexed, curious, and not without suspicion that the currying the grave displeasure of her lord.

It seemed to her a very long time before Paul came back, and when he did come in, she thought, looking at him with the keen eyes of love, that there was some secret embarrassment under the customary manner of kissing her and asking her if she had been lonely by herself.

"No, Paul," she answered, "I've not been lonely, for I've had a visitor. Tom has been here."

Paul's arms, which were around her, relaxed their grasp.

He frowned.

"What! Hasn't he gone back yet?"

"He's going this afternoon."

"The sooner the better."

"Yes," she hesitated. "Paul, I hope you won't mind something that I did, that I let him do."

"What was that?"

"What was that?"

"You know the splendid presents you gave me, the jewellery, the tiara, and necklace, and all these things?"

Paul said nothing. He had grown suddenly pale and stiff, and he stood silent, hard, with his eyes sternly fixed upon her.

"He said I ought not to carry them about with me," she hurried on, troubled by the expression of his face.

"That they ought to be locked up in the strong-room at Wintarsden, with my mother's."

He was back beside her in two long strides, with his eyes blazing.

His fists were clenched, his jaw looked suddenly square and frightful.

"I-I let him take them back," faltered Lady Ursula.

"You did? You did? You let that?"

The Cologne Gazette is showing symptoms of fright as to Roumania's action. It declares that the Roumanian army, numbering 450,000 men, 600 modern guns, 500 machine guns, and 18,000 cavalry, is ready to enter the war on the side of the allies. There is no doubt, it declares, of Roumania's attitude.

d-d whipper-snapper take those jewels off her! You fool, you wretched fool, you've ruined me. And now, having raised his clenched fist, he struck her full on the chest, throwing her from him, so that, forced back, against the sofa, she fell upon it violently.

CHAPTER VII.

Not a sound escaped from Lady Ursula's lips as she fell back upon the safe, bewildered, stricken to the heart by a personal insult such as she had never dreamed it possible that anyone should offer to her. And it was her own husband, the man that she had loved above all the world, the man in whose choice she had taken so much innocent pride, who had inflicted upon her this humiliation.

It was the moral blow which wounded her for the physical one, it had indeed made a great monetary effect, in causing her to fall on the sofa. But this was not an account of any special force in the attack; if nothing had been in the way of her frightened, backward steps, she would certainly have been able to keep her feet.

But the knowledge that Paul had raised his hand against her was so horrible to bear, so bewildering, that she just stood there, pale, quivering, and crushed, without a word, or so much as an upward look towards his face.

Paul, to do him justice, was at once overwhelmed with shame at what he had done. An unprincipled rascal, whose tastes and manners were but the mask of a self-indulgent and unscrupulous nature, he had not lost all the jewellery. It is nothing but a responsibility and a worry to me. Just wait, and I'll get you the authorization you want.

"I can't wait," said he quickly. "Come, have I your permission to take them away?"

"Yes. You have mine. But you must have Paul's, too."

But these diamonds and things are absolutely the most valuable possession I have, and I should have preferred to keep them, as always have kept them, in my possession, that is to say, in yours.

The Parasite

By Private 440410, Fifty-Third Battalion

Saturday noon brought him the respite that his lazy soul had craved for all week, and, shutting down his desk, he meandered out of the great war-house into sunny, snowbanked Main street.

He strolled into a bar, swallowed a cocktail to discover an appetite, and whiffed it into consciousness with a second. Then he ambled across to his pet cafe.

It was disgustingly full of khaki, he reflected, and khaki was a color that made him morally bilious. But he found an isolated corner, and there, eyes glued to his plate, so that he seemed to hypnotize his food, he soon ate his way from soup to syrup, not neglecting a generous serving of half-pint and roast-veal.

Whilst his second cup of strong coffee was cooling at his elbow—he drank this to steady his nerves for a goodly turn of the morning paper, and scanned the war news. The bloody battles of which he read, and the noble sacrifice of brave men, might have been enacted on the planet Mars, for any appeal they made to his slothful soul. But, like a man who lies in bed between warm blankets, listening with pleasure to the storm that howls without, so loved he to listen to the thunderous din of war, as echoed through his daily paper.

What time he enjoyed the protection of the greatest reef that ever rode the seas, and the brilliant armies that ever trod the earth.

He laid down the sheet presently, and turned his mind to his own narrow little stage, on which he played his life. The afternoon and evening lay before him like a long and pleasant road. How to extract the maximum of pleasure and pleasure from the forthcoming hours—no other thought possessed him.

He debated, as though it were a question of conscience, whether he should play pool with Tom and pick, or divert himself at a matinee. The clock struck one.

At the same time, nearly two thousand miles away, somewhere in Flanders, the night had fallen. Searing his way through a sulphurous inferno of gunpowder smoke, the red sun had dropped below the blotched horizon, and left in its wake a pure trail of silver stars.

"In Hell Ditch, a short half-moon shaped trench, marking the very limit of the British salient, and distant not two hundred yards from the German lines, two companies of a Canadian battalion kept their guard.

Their eyes for lack of sleep—this time through the weary hours of watch—were bright as any star in the heavens; their faces were grey and gaunt, reflecting a great patience which, moreover, was unshakable.

They stamped there and a noble adherence to duty.

They were waiting. The spirit of an almost tragic expectancy brooded over that trench. Until their eyes ached and throbbed, the lookout men searched the two hundred yards of No Man's Land that lay between their own glorified furrow, and that of the enemy.

A crescent moon shed a faint light—a light that tricked the imagination, and peopled the intervening ground with a thousand fantasies. A dead Prussian that had stared all that day into the very face of the sun, seemed suddenly to move, to turn on his side, and move towards the shadow of an abandoned machine gun.

From that gash in the earth where lay the Hun, dark forms seemed to emerge and advance towards the British lines. The scene, so sharply defined by the recent bombardment, seemed loaded with ominous meaning.

"They're ring up the curtain on this act soon as they please," whispered Pte. 441 to Pte. 442.

"But you're kidding," said Pte. 441. "Let the orchestra strike up."

"There goes the big drum," he added a moment later, as a deep drum beat sent the air, sounding the enemy's defiance. The challenge was hurled back the next instant by their own artillery.

And the incongruity of the epithet did not take away from the effect of his sincerity.

"You tell me what you meant when you said it would ruin you for my brother to take your jewels back to England."

"Well, I used too strong a word."

flame shone up from every man's life, where the moon flashed along his fixed bayonet.

What inspired these men that they stood so resolute there, waiting and flashing the word that would rush them into the outstretched arms of Death?

They had seen bleeding Belgium and stricken France, and were glad to stake their lives to the last drop of blood to defend from a like fate their own blood in the green West, and the homes of their kin in the Old Land. They stood there to push back the bloody tide of savagery that threatened to inundate the homes of gentle-minded and God-fearing people, to defend their women and children, and to hurl down the gates in the name of Canada, against the most ruthless and unscrupulous foe that ever wielded the red sword and flaming torch of war.

At the moment that these men had fixed their bayonets, and taken a stiffer hold upon their rifles, the Parasite made his way towards the pool room.

Outside the city hall, he suffered a shock that filled his heart, with a sudden anger, and sent the blood rushing to his face until the veins that crossed his forehead triangularly stood out like a brand.

Before him, barring his way, clothed in that ubiquitous khaki, stood a recruiting sergeant, a man who seemed to take his duties most seriously, to judge by the sharp scrutiny of his keen grey eyes.

"Want you come and give us a hand, m'lad? There's room for you."

The words, though spoken quietly enough, seemed to the Parasite as a lash across the face. A hundred times a day, this khaki-crazy world asked him this question, not by word of mouth, but by wondering glances covertly directed at him by maid and matron and man, whose brothers and sons had gone forth ready to sacrifice all to avenge the desolated hearths of Belgium, and to defend their own homes from the most consummate butcher that ever blackened and blood-stained the pages of history.

"Don't waste your time on me," he muttered, and pushed his way past the sergeant, with averted eyes.

Once again he had denied his country.

He had become the fulcrum of Hell incarnate. Here the whole world seemed to rock and shake and tremble, and the noises of a thousand thunderstorms smote down upon the trench, raining shrapnel. A furious artillery duel was under way between the British and the enemy's guns, in addition to which two Prussian batteries concentrated their fire solely upon Hell Ditch, the most threatening point in that sector of the British lines. They had got the range to a nicety—for days past they had got the range—and their shells, breaking over and behind the men, kicked back their load of iron ball, and raked the ditch from end to end.

Curious bundles lay about in the bed of that entrenchment, twisted and blood-stained, and before the bombardment, and the noise of a thousand thunderstorms smote down upon the trench, raining shrapnel. was thoroughly at home. They gave him confidence, and at such times his distaste for the army grew more violent than ever. His "business ties" represented by so many dollars per week—assumed greater importance in his mind, until he felt quite a man of affairs, in whom the commerce of the country was not a little involved.

He glanced at the clock, and was surprised that he had spent four hours around the green cloth. He had killed the time very pleasantly, he reflected.

"Let's go get a highball and some supper," he suggested. "Then we'll take in a show."

After the fourth hour, there was a noticeable change in the character of the bombardment. The roar of the guns, though almost as heavy and quite as incessant as ever, hailed from behind. The British artillery, strongly reinforced for this advance action had long been pre-concentrated—seemed now to have reached the very zenith of its attack, whilst the Prussian fire had become intermittent and halting—because their batteries being out of action.

Note and Comment

Why does not the U. S. government protest to the French government against the use of the name American Legion for the corps bearing that name in the French service?

To protest against the use of the word "American" by a Canadian battalion of American citizens while allowing a French corps to use the name without protest is an affront to Canada.

Who are Americans, anyway? The States have no more right to that name than we here in Canada, or the Mexicans or the different peoples of Central or South America.

The United States citizens are a people without a name, unless you call them "Yankees."

For years they have been called Americans, but the only real Americans are the Redskins of the western plains, and the tribes in the east, along with those in the southern portion of the American continent.

As Seen Thro' Jeuton Eyes.

These English—who can know their ways?

When, flushed with triumphs, large and many
We condescend with tactful signs
To hint of peace on generous lines,
They answer in a flippant phrase
That they're not taking any.

When from our conquering high-seas (ark, (Detained at home by stress of (weather)

We loosed the emblematic dove,
Conveying overtures of love,
Back came the bird with that remark,
Minus its best tail feather.

They said they never wanted war;
Yet, when we talk of war's abating,
And name the price for them to pay,
They have the curious nerve to say
That when they please and not before,
They'll do their own dictating.

How can you deal with minds so slow,
With men who give no indication,
That we by any further shock
Into their heads can hope to knock
Enough intelligence to know,
That they're a beaten nation?

Odd, that we cannot make it clear,
That we have won; and even odder
That other markets seem to jump,
While our exchange is on the slump,
And everything's starvation dear,
(Excepting cannon-fodder.) Punch.

Col. Teddy Roosevelt in a speech at Detroit, says that it is about time that the U. S. stopped talking about national defence and preparedness and got down to business if they were to make their nation as strong as its convictions are in regards to right and wrong.

The Colonel believes in getting down to brass tacks and cutting out the tall talk.

The weather lately although a trifle cool, is just what the country needs and the prospects are bright for another crop like the one of 1915.

The recent showers will bring the grain along in fine shape and a few warm days will hasten it wonderfully. With the present price of logs and a bumper harvest, the farmers are coming into their own again.

By a majority of 81 the citizens of Berlin, Ontario, decided to change the name of their city and a committee of prominent citizens will pick out a new name.

Alberta's share of the Canadian Patriotic Fund for next year will be $600,000, or $1.20 per capita.

$10,000,000 will be required throughout the Dominion for 1917.

Henry Ford says he will be a candidate for the presidency if he is wanted, but he won't finance a third party. Henry's experiences in the financing of that peace party has evidently cured him of the habit.

Nothing else that has appeared in print illustrates the shortage in shipping so much as the cabled report that two Danish sailing vessels built in 1776 and kept as relics are to be put into service again.

Samuel Hill, an American railway man who has been visiting in Europe, and Baron Oppenheim, a London banker, are telling newspapermen in the States that the war will be over this year. Probably they have no better sources of information on this subject than we have here in Monitor. Their predictions are mere guesses, influenced by their desires, and perhaps their interests.

In holding up the bill extending the powers of the Dominion railway commission the senate has added one more to the long list of reasons why it should be either mended or ended.

A Ford car bought part by part costs only $40 more than the list price of the complete car as against $940 more for the parts of the average car priced around $1000 and less $940—Cost, over and above the list price of the car itself, for enough spare parts to build the average touring car priced around $1000 and less.

$40—Cost, over and above the list price of the car itself, for enough spare parts to build a Ford touring car complete.

$900—Difference in part by part cost of cars. And remember, both by laboratory tests and actual service tests, the parts of a Ford car have proved themselves superior, part by part, to those of any other car.

Don't these figures drive home what is meant by the low upkeep cost of the Ford?

EXPERIMENTS

Teach Things of Value

Where one has never made the experiment of leaving off tea or coffee and drinking Postum, it is still easy to learn something about it by reading the experiences of others.

Drinking Postum is a pleasant way out of tea or coffee troubles. A man writes:

"My wife was a victim of nervousness, weak stomach and loss of appetite for years; and although we resorted to numerous methods for relief, one of which was a change from coffee to tea, it was all to no purpose." (Both tea and coffee are injurious to many persons, because they contain the subtle poisonous drug, caffeine.)

"We knew coffee was causing the trouble but could not find anything to take its place until we tried Postum. Within two weeks after she quit coffee and began using Postum almost all her troubles had disappeared as if by magic. It was truly wonderful. Her nervousness was gone, stomach trouble relieved, appetite improved, and above all, a night's rest was complete and refreshing."

"This sounds like an exaggeration, as it all happened so quickly. Each day there was improvement, for the Postum was undoubtedly strengthening her. Every particle of this good work is due to drinking Postum 'in place of coffee.' Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont."

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c pkgs.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both forms are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup. "There's a Reason" for Postum.—Sold by Grocers.

France to Make Greater Efforts in Munitions

M. Thomas Says Great as These at Present Are They Are Insufficient

A warning that France must make still greater efforts was given by Albert Thomas, the munitions minister, in an address at the Cateau works. M. Thomas praised the efforts of the works and continued:

"But these efforts, great as they are, are still insufficient. The enemy had a considerable advantage over us which we have perhaps not yet regained. Certainly our armies, thanks to you, are today well provided with munitions, but you know how the enemy, with his methodical, disciplined organization, has constantly increased his strength."

"It is your task to continue to surpass our production and with the help of our allies to equal the effort of a menacing, sleepless enemy."

M. Thomas also praised the industrial organizations which before the war were at strife with the state, for "the present union of efforts and organization which the most audacious among us would never have dreamed was possible."

One day Pat appeared on the street a huge tear in his coat sleeve. "Look here, Pat," protested a friend, "why don't you get that hole mended?" "Not on your life," said Pat; "a hole may be the result of an accident, but a patch is a sure sign of poverty."

She Did Not Heed The Danger Signals

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER DIABETES

Mrs. McDonald Might Have Saved Herself Months of Pain, Sleeplessness and Anxiety by Using Dodd's Kidney Pills Earlier.

Grand Narrows, Victoria Co., C.B.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure kidney disease in its worst form is evidenced by the case of Mrs. Frederick McDonald, an estimable resident of this place. Mrs. McDonald suffered from diabetes for two years, and found her first relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I am sure I would be in my grave today but for Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mrs. McDonald states. "The doctor attended me for five months for diabetes, but I was worse when I stopped taking his medicine than when I started. I could not get a wink of sleep. As soon as I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I fell in a solid sleep for one hour, and soon I got so that I could sleep fine."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have done so much for me that I feel like recommending them to everybody."

Mrs. McDonald states that her earlier symptoms were shortness of breath, dizziness, headache and a bitter taste in her mouth in the morning. All these are symptoms of kidney trouble—danger signals that no one can afford to neglect. Had she heeded them and taken Dodd's Kidney Pills she would have saved herself months of pain and anxiety.

NOTHING TO EQUAL BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Lawrence M. Brown, Walton, N.S., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and believe there is nothing to equal them for little ones. They instantly banish constipation and teething troubles and unlike any other medicine I have used they are pleasant to take and do not gripe the baby." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

They Cleanse While They Cure.—The vegetable compounds of which Ferriol's Vegetable Pills are composed, mainly dandelion and mandrake, clear the stomach and intestines of deleterious matter and restore the deranged organs to healthy action. Hence they are the best remedy for indigestion available today. A trial of them will establish the truth of this assertion and do more to convince the ailing than anything that can be written of these pills.

Demonstration Farms and Schools

There are a number of agricultural schools with farms attached in the province of Alberta. For three years past, says Hon. Duncan Marshall, these farms have paid their way and have a surplus in the form of live stock. On one of these farms Mr. Marshall claims to have the best herd of Shorthorns in America. The capital expenditure on the schools has been $170,000, and there are more pupils in these schools today than there are in the four and a half million dollar agricultural college in Manitoba.

The sum paid by Great Britain for liquor in 1915 was $909,745,000. This represents for every man, woman and child in its forty-six millions an expenditure of $17.30 for the year. No fewer than 39,960,000 barrels of beer were consumed in twelve months.

WHEN IS A GOOD OIL NOT GOOD?

WHEN it's used in the wrong place. You cannot expect a heavy oil designed for use on a low-speed, high-power tractor to lubricate efficiently the finely adapted bearings of a high-speed, low-power tractor.

For every part of every machine there is one right oil—and it is worth money to you to find it.

The Imperial Oil Company makes a large number of farm lubricants—each one exactly suited for its particular purpose.

STANDARD GAS ENGINE OIL

Recommended by leading builders for all types of internal combustion engines, whether tractor or stationary, gasoline or kerosene. It keeps its body at high temperature, is practically free from carbon, and is absolutely uniform in quality.

PRAIRIE HARVESTER OIL

An excellent all-round lubricant for exposed bearings of harvesters and other farm machinery. Stays on the bearings; will not gum or corrode.

CAPITOL CYLINDER OIL

The most effective and economical lubricant for steam engine cylinders. Proven superior in practical competition with other cylinder oils.

ELDORADO CASTOR OIL

A high-grade, thick-bodied oil for lubricating the loose bearings of farm machinery, sawmills and factory shafting.

THRESHER HARD OIL

Keeps the cool bearing cool. Does not depend on heat or friction to cause it to lubricate.

STEEL BARRELS—All our oils can be obtained in 28-gallon and 45 gallon steel barrels. These barrels save their cost by eliminating leakage. You use every drop you pay for. Clean and convenient.

If your lubricating problem gives you trouble, let us help you. Tell us the machine, the make, the part—and we will gladly give you the benefit of our experience in selecting the proper lubricants.

Every Foot of Land Being Utilized
Germany has laid down utilization of the land, every foot of land, as one of her first principles. France has adopted a regulation to the effect that every bit of space must be used for production, falling this being done by the owner the state is to take possession. Britain has given orders that golf courses and all meadow land are to be used for grazing purposes, and that previous pastures are to be put down in crops. Private parks are also being wooded out and the land devoted to practical agriculture.

Why Cheers For Kaiser?
A contingent of Irish recruits were leaving their native village for the military centre, amid cheers from the assembled villagers and the departing men. Suddenly one of the recruits called for "Three cheers for the Kaiser." When the contingent arrived at its destination this man was called up before the officer in charge and asked what he meant by such conduct. He was quite cheerful about it. "Och, Colonel!" he said, "you don't understand Ireland. If it hadn't been for the Kaiser, there'd have been no blooming war."

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING

Do Not Use Harsh Purgatives—A Tonic is All You Need

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily irritated, appetite flakey, sometimes headaches, and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuritis. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as so many people do, in the belief that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you that what you need in spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine makes new blood which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong.

L. R. Whitman, Harmony Mills, N.S., says: "As a tonic and strength builder, or I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills wonderful. My whole system was badly run down, and although I faithfully took a tonic, given me by my doctor, I could note no improvement. Then I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was soon restored to my old time health. I can most heartily endorse this medicine."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50. Fortified Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dr. Magill, chairman of the board of grain commissioners, in an interview stated that there would be more work regarding the handling of grain at Fort William this season than ever before.

"The elevators are full to overflowing, with over 40,000,000 bushels of grain, excluding the hospital elevators, the terminal elevator capacity at the head of the lakes is 40,000,000 bushels and the stocks in store exceed this total. There are still 100,000,000 bushels of wheat to be marketed by the farmers and there are 45,000,000 bushels actually on the farms not moved out of the bins. All this grain has to be moved east, the elevators have to be emptied of their contents and all this grain has to come down here and sent on to the east. There is a much larger volume of grain to be moved than there ever has been before in the history of these two cities," said the chairman.

The Lewis Machine Gun

One of the guns which has been adopted by the British for land and aerial operations is the Lewis machine gun. Canadian battalions also are armed with this quick-firing weapon, the invention of Colonel I. N. Lewis, late of the United States army. It weighs twenty-six and a half pounds, is marked by great simplicity, and can be dismantled or assembled in thirty seconds. It fires existing service ammunition at the rate of five hundred rounds per minute, is gas-operated and air-cooled, and may be continuously in any position without danger of overheating. It is particularly adapted for firing from aeroplanes and from armored cars or automobile mounts.

One farmer out of every five in Minnesota belongs to a farmers' elevator company. One farmers' elevator company has a membership of 600, one has a membership of 500, two of 400 and four of from 200 to 400. The business done by all the farmers' elevators of the state in 1912-1913 was $24,000,000. In 1913-1914 $30,000,000. Of the $24,000,000 was for grain marketed, and $2,000,000 for supplies of various kinds purchased for members of the company.

Demand for Flaxseed Exceeds the Supply

Prices Ruling Very High

The annual production of flaxseed in North America is from 15,000,000 to 18,000,000 bushels, while the consumption is about 20,000,000 bushels. The shortage of 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels is normally imported from Argentina.

The war, however, has forced the freight rate from Buenos Ayres up to 70c a bushel, and has correspondingly increased the price of every bushel on hand or that can be raised here. So instead of selling at 70 or 80 cents a bushel as in 1912, flaxseed has sold this winter as high as $2.26 and has averaged around $2.

This makes it at least as profitable a crop to grow as wheat in wartime. Director Ordsdale of the Dominion experimental farm, Ottawa, says: "Prices for flax are likely to be good this coming fall, so where circumstances suggest flax, it will quite likely be wise to grow this crop."

Fortunately the last two weeks of May is the best time to sow flax, and it does well on new breaking, so that after wheat seeding is finished a considerable acreage of flax can be got in as an extra. It leaves the soil in as good shape for wheat as would a summerfallow, and the farmer has a profitable "found crop to the good."

Dust Causes Asthma—Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which, no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest and health. It relieves the passages, and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

Along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific in British Columbia a considerable amount of live stock is being introduced, and the foundation is being laid for more or less extensive mixed farming communities.

In these times when there is a marked scarcity of male labor, and production of foodstuffs is so much called for, there is no more advantageous and healthful manner in which women and children can be employed than in the care of poultry.

Iowa Man's View of Canada—Fears Conscription in U.S.

"I don't want to go to war and I have come to Canada to get some land and make a home," said Carl Carlson, a husky Iowan, who went west yesterday to view the land of promise.

"This talk about conscription scaring away immigration from south of the line is all bosh," he continued. "I figure that by coming to Canada I am avoiding the possibility of being compelled to go to war. I believe that the United States is going to get embroiled in this war before long and I am getting out while the getting out is good. If I am in Canada it will be some years before I am liable for conscription, but if I stay in the United States I figure that I might as well be in a hornet's nest."

"It will take a large army to hold the aliens in check over there, to say nothing about raising an army of any size to send overseas. Then I figure that Mexico will jump in and make matters warm by daring raids and another large army will be required to attend to the Greasers."

"Canada seems the proper place for a peace-loving American, to my way of thinking, and that's the reason that I'm here."—Winnipeg Free Press.

MAN IS AS OLD AS HIS ARTERIES

THE failure of the arteries is one of the tragedies of modern life. Men in the very prime of life, and in the midst of business activities, are suddenly cut off. In many cases the blow comes before they realize their condition.

And what is the cause? Most usually overeating and drinking, combined with too little bodily exercise. The blood becomes overloaded with poisons. The kidneys break down in an effort to filter the blood, degeneration of the arteries takes place, an artery in the brain bursts, a clot is formed and paralysis results. Or it may be an artery in the heart that gives way and causes heart failure.

And how is this condition to be avoided? By moderation in eating and drinking, and by keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels regular and active. If you do not get sufficient exercise to accomplish this, it is necessary to use such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is only by the action of these organs that the blood can be purified and the poisons removed from the system. In using you are not making any experiment, for they have no equal as a means of awakening the liver, kidneys and bowels to healthful activity. They prevent such serious troubles as hardening of the arteries, and thereby promote comfort and health and prolong life.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

Germans betrayed Irish rebels. refused to invade England
as promised.

London, May 22nd.—This is the history as told by the authorities here of the widespread plot which resulted in the ill-fated uprising in Ireland which plunged the Emerald Isle for a period into a reign of bloodshed and destruction. It is a story to the effect that the Sinn Fein organization was used as a pawn in the game played by Berlin and certain Germans and revolutionists in America, and of how the failure of the revolt was made doubly sure by the inability or disinclination on the part of Germany to carry out important features of the plan at almost the last moment.

British forces now at Kut-el-Amara

London, May 22.—A dispatch received from Lieut. Gen. Sir Percy Lake, commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia, shows that the forces of Lieut. Gen. Sir George Goringe, operating on the south bank of the Tigris, have now reached Kut-el-Amara.
